Laura,

Here are responses.

Q. I understand from some Dimock homeowners who were scheduled to have meetings with EPA representatives to review their test results this week that those meetings have been postponed. These are people in the first group of 11 whose results were distributed last week. Can you explain the reason for the postponement?

A. Meetings previously scheduled for Thursday and Friday with seven Dimock residents have had to be delayed due to a backlog of work. EPA will be working with residents to reschedule new times for early next week.

Q. One homeowner mentioned that one reason he was given by the EPA for the postponement of his meeting was that EPA representatives are behind in handing out the second round of test results. Have all of those tests been distributed at this point?

A. EPA has not yet distributed second round test results.

Q. Do you plan to release a summary of those results?

A. Once we have shared second round results with the homeowners, we will release a compilation of those results to interested parties, including media. This information will be made available on the Agency's website and will follow the requirements of the Privacy Act.

Hi Terri and Roy,

I understand from some Dimock homeowners who were scheduled to have meetings with EPA representatives to review their test results this week that those meetings have been postponed. These are people in the first group of 11 whose results were distributed last week.

Can you explain the reason for the postponement?

How many meetings were postponed (I know some already took place)?

One homeowner mentioned that one reason he was given by the EPA for the postponement of his meeting was that EPA representatives are behind in handing out the second round of test results. Have all of those tests been distributed at this point?

Do you plan to release a summary of those results?

Thanks for your help.

Best,
